He touched his harp, and nations heard, entranced.

THE BUMA.

LOUISA P. SMITH.

Fly on, nor touch thy wing, bright lird,
Too near our single-learth,
Or the warbling, now so sweetly heard,
May lose its note of muth,
Fly on, nor seek a place of rest
In the home of "care-worn things:"
"Twould due the light of thy shining crest,
And thy brightly burnished wings,

That flow from a troubled earthly tide. The fields of upper air are thine, Thy place where wars shine free; I would the home, bright one, were mine, Above life's stormy son. I would never wander, bird, like thee,

To dip them where the waters pl

So near this place again;
With wing and spirit once light and free,
They should wear no more the chain
With which they are bound and fetered here,
For ever struggling for skies more clear.

There are many things like thee, bright bird;

Hopes as thy plumage gay;
Our air is with them for ever stirred,
But still in the air they stay.
And Happiness, like thee, fair one,

He were lovering o'er.
But rests in a land of brighter sun,
On a waveless, penecial shore.
And stopps to law her weary wings.
Where the fount of "living waters" springs.

THE PAST.

This common field, this little brook-What is there hidden in these two, That I so often on them look, Oftener than on the heaven's blue? No beauty lies upon the field; Small music dath the river yield: And yet I look and Jaok again, With something of a pleasant pain.

'Tis thirty-can't be thirty years, Since last I stood upon this plant;
Since last I stood upon this plant;
Which o'er the brook its figure rears,
And watch'd the pebbles as they sank?
How white the stream! I still remember
Its margin glassed by hoar December, And how the sun fell on the snow; Ah! can it le so long ago?

It cometh back ;-So blithe, so bright, It harries to my enger ken, As though but on short winter's night Had darken'd o'er the world since then. It is the same clear dazzling scepe: Perhaps the grass is scarce as green; Perhaps the river's troubled voice Doth not so plainly say—"Rejoice."

Yet Nature surely never ranges, Ne'er quits her gay and flowry crown;
But, ever j. yful, merely changes
The primrose for the thistle down.
'This me alone who, waxing old,
Look on her with an aspect cold, Dissolve her in our burning tears, Or clothe her with the mists of years!

JUDGE GASTON'S LAST WORDS. The Clarion thus beautifully and impressively sketches the death bed scene of this excellent man.

His last words were in admirable keeping with the purity and piety of his long life. Surrounded by a few of his chosen friends who were at his bedside on the first intimation of a danger to which he was insensible, he was relating with great playfulness the particulars of a convivial party at Washington city, many years ago and spoke of one who on that occasion avowed himself a 'Free Thinker' in religion. 'From that day,' said Judge Gaston, 'I always looked on that man with distrust. I do not say that a Free Thinker may not be an honorable man; that he may not from high motives scorn to do a mean act; but I dare not trust him. A belief in an overruling Divinity who shapes our ends, whose eye is upon us, and who will reward us according to our deeds is necessary. We must believe and feel that there is a God All wise'-and raising himself and seeming to swell with the thought-"AL-MIGHTY!" There was a rush to the brain .-He sank in the arms of his friends-and in five minutes his spirit was gone! Not a struggle betokened its flight. Not a gronn pained the ear of his agonized friends. His body has gone to the dust; his spirit we cannot doubt, now rests in the bosom of that God Almighty whose name was last on his lips, and to whom he had long given the homage of a pure and devoted

A DOLLAR A DAY AND FOUND. A gentleman who resides in the vicinity of the city, and whose early mornings are devoted to the culture of a large garden attached to the house, finding himself some-what behindhand in his horticultural department last spring, accosted a tidy looking Irishman, passing by his gate one morning, with the inquiry, "if he would like a job?" Shure, sir, an's that same I'm looking afthur,' said Paddy, in a rich brogue, which won the heart of him by whom he was addressed, and who immediately replied, 'I shall want you for four days-what wages do you ask for ?' 'Why, sir,' returned Pat, 'as I live a good way from this, and my going home for males will bother my day's work. wile an extra mouth at your honor's kitchen table is nothing at all, I'll just come for a dollar a day, and you shall find me!

This was agreed to; and, as Pat had his rent to pay the next day, and wanted to get something for the childres, the gentleman paid him $4 on the spot, and the work was to be commenced the next day. The next day, and the next, and then the whole days passed by, and Pat was never seen at the garden or gate !

It might have been a month after the occurrence above related took place, when the parties meeting by accident in the street, Pat was accosted by his employer, in an angry tone, with-

* Well, sir, pray why did you not come to me, according to your agreement?'
'Sure, sir,' said Paddy, (with a respectful twitch at the rim of his well-worn tile,) 'it's myself that was ready to do my part of the bargain—but your honor's at fault this time, any how." 'And pray how?' asked the other.

'Lt's yourself 'ill not deny that you agreed to give me a dollar a day and find me?' And didn't I give you a dollar, and pay you beforehand, too?" "Thrue for you—yer honor did that same but you did n't find me!" Find you, you scoundrel! I ransacked every street in town : but where the deuce were you?" Shooting at Muddy Pond Woods, yer

ADVANTAGES OF SCIENCE.

Mr. Holbrook, of Medway, the celebrated bellfounder, gave us a little incident of life which is worth relating, if for nothing more than to show the importance of a knowledge of chemistry. An immense pile of cinders and dross had accumulated near his foundry, which was supposed to be entirely worthless, and was used to fill up stone walls, &c. A foreigner who happened to be in town examned the pile day, and offered $100 for it. So large a price excued Mr II.'s suspicions that the cinders might contain valuable metal, and he declined selling it. The man then offered $200, which of course confirmed his opinion, and, after a little parley, the stranger acknowledged that he was acquainted with a process by which valuable metal. might be extracted from the cinders, which he offered to divulge for a small compensation. A furnace and apparatus were constructed according to his direction, and when the whole pile was run through, the mass of neglected rubbish yielded a nett profit of thirteen thousand dollars! So much for knowing "how to do it .- Lynn Freeman.

SHREWD.—As a late Professor Hamilton as one day near Aberdeen, he met a well nown individual of weak intellect. 'Pray,' id the Professor, accosting him, 'how long an a person live without brains?' 'I dinna on 'reclied S. was one day near Aberdeen, he met a well known individual of weak intellect. 'Pray,' said the Professor, accosting him, how long can a person live without brains?' 'I dinna ken, replied Semmy, scratching his head; 'how old are yourself?'

Professor Locke, of Cincinnati, has invented and made a magnet which lifts eleven hundred pounds .- The magnet weighs only 174 pounds, and is probably the most powerful magnet of the size known.

SEIZURE OF PAPER.-Within a short ime, several parcels of paper in the market have been found to contain some 100 sheets ess in the ream than required by law , and have been returned to the autioneer. Yesterday 500 reams of similar paper were seized on board a vessel up for a Southeran port, and will be forfeited. Value say $150. Boston Post.

For the care of Coughs, Colds, Asthma, whooping Cough, Catarth, pains in the side and breast, Broachitis liver complaints, and all those affections of the throat and lungs, which are a source of so much suffering and so often terminate in Consumeration, this remedy is justly and highly distinguished. It is purely vegetable, mild and gentle in its effects open the system, and can be taken in the most delicate cases with safety as well as well as unlity. So extensively has it been used and so often proved successful even in extreme and apparently almost hopeless cases, not only as a paliative but as a remedy; that the proprietor feels no hesiteney in introducing it and recommending it to all who unfortunately may have occasion to resort to some means of recovery. Physicians, familiar with its effects and aware of the healing properties of this vegetable preparation, not unfrequently prescribed it in their practice, and with the Medical Faculty generally, it has met with more than ordinary approbation.
